

Bossy Behavior at Tom Ford

September 6, 2007

"I am in love with Marilyn," declared Tom Ford at the party he hosted for the launch of Marilyn Minter's monograph on Tuesday night. "After we finished shooting my campaign, I missed being drenched in Vaseline and water in her studio." Amy Sacco, Todd Eberle, and Dr. Lisa Airan were among those who came out to toast Minter's hyper-real, gritty images at Ford's Madison Avenue emporium. The photographer/painter herself was bemused by all the attention. "I knew I would make it as an artist because I believe in my work," she said. "I just didn't think it would happen while I was alive and that Bruce Springsteen would come to my book launch!" Indeed, the presence of the Boss had the usually blasé fashion and social packs gawking. "I know nothing about fashion," declared Springsteen. "I'm here because my wife knows Tom." Jeremy Piven clearly disagreed with his sartorial assessment. "He's got his own fashion," interjected Piven. "Nobody can touch him." And leave it to Tom Ford to steal a little fashion-week thunder even when he's not showing a collection himself.
